Living six months in New Zealand's wine country, Dr. van der Laan realizes in his encounters with Sauvignon Blanc and Pinot that screw caps rapidly replace corks in this foreign land. Dinner after dinner, wine bottles twist open.

Will the bond between bottles and corks disappear throughout the world? As the doctor's concern grows, so does his obligation to save the last of the world's corks.

It hits him harder than a ton of screw caps:

He will build his very own cork boat and sail it across New England's longest river.

Personalize your cork and it will set sail with handmade cork boat!
